Robredo gets marching order from President Noy

By TJ Bugarin

NEWLY APPOINTED Interior and Local Government Secretary Jesse Robredo has a clear marching order from President Aquino: Stamp out "jueteng."

"We issued a very clear directive to stop jueteng. According to [Legal Theory], no reason for it to continue," Robredo, who met with Mr. Aquino shortly before his appointment was announced last on Friday, said the Inquirer by phone yesterday afternoon.

He will assume the post, which will give him supervision over the Philippine National Police as well as the Bureau of Fire Protection and the Jail Management, on Tuesday.

The multi-talented former mayor of

Maga City said he would meet with officials of the PSE Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office and other agencies to determine the extent of the numbers game that swindles billions of pesos for its operators. (See In the Know on Page A16.)

Palace forms media group led by Coloma and Carandang

By TJ Bugarin

PRESIDENT AQUINO has finally organized his own communications group to act as Press Secretary and articulate his policies after a frantic 10 days in power.

Mr. Aquino has tapped retired civil servant—former Transportation Undersecretary and BusinessWorld columnist Hermie "Toney" Coloma and ANC anchor Ricky Carandang—to head the group.

Former columnist Marcelo Quezon II is also part of the group.

"Yes, it's been formed. That's the message of President Aquino. He wants the communications group [to be formed] because it's an important part of the Office of the Press Secretary," Secretary General Lacerda said in a forum over government-run affairs.

The presidential spokesperson, however, declined to reveal details of the composition and structure of the group, saying they were being finalized and would be announced tomorrow.

"We will have more details about it. It's not that simple. We will announce everything by Monday," he said.

However, a source close to the President confirmed the designation of the three men to the Palace communications team. He said Carandang and Quezon would be in charge of "newspaper" and Coloma, "television."

The source also said that for the meantime, none of the three incoming officials would hold the title of Press Secretary.

According to another reliable source in Malacanan, Carandang is expected

Close encounters with 6 presidents

By Christine O. Avendaño

CARMESITA SAN, or locally "Tita Ching" to Filipino reporters, had close encounters with six presidents in 42 years.

In her autobiography, "From Macapagal to Macapagal-Arroyo: My 42 years inside Malacanang," launched last Tuesday, she relates a "moment" with outgoing Ferdinand Marcos.

It happened four decades ago, when her boss, the minister of information, was out and Tita Ching had to choose but to take dictation over the phone for a statement that Marcos wanted to go out to the media that day.

She must have done a good job because after reading back the notes without a single correction, she earned a "very good" praise from Marcos. Presidential encounters of this kind happened all the time in the working life of Tita Ching, who worked in Malacanang for four decades.

Former Press Secretary and now

Secretary Board member Ignacia Benayon said that Tita Ching was a good candidate for the Guinness World Records as the "longest-serving cover official of any country," having served six presidents and 21 press secretaries in 42 years.

She had been in government service from the time of President Diosdado Macapagal until the presidency of his daughter, Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Tita Ching was also a witness to new presidents being toppled by peo-

'Super body' to probe media killings

By Dana P. Ramirez

Inquirer Staff Writers

PRESIDENT Benigno Aquino III is forming a "super body" to address attacks against journalists, even as another radio reporter was shot on Friday in Manila.

Miguel Brera, 46, a reporter of radio station DZBB in Manila, was shot in the neck and leg by motorcycle-riding men while he was on his way home from work on Friday night. He is fighting for his life in a hospital in nearby Iloilo City.

Brera's secretary, Lito de Luna, had told officials of the National Police (NPA) that some City Hall officials were being asked to create a "super body" to handle media killings.

"It will be something stronger than the current task force that handles extrajudicial killings to give journalists more protection," he said.

The NPA also issued a statement on Friday saying the Ministry of Justice is creating a new "super body" to handle media killings. The new body will be created by the Department of Justice.

Ampatuan Sr. returns to jail in ambulance

RESCUED — The 26-year-old man was brought back to jail in Taipei City Friday afternoon from a military hospital, in Quanzhou City after his doctors said he could be treated in detention, all officials said.

The purchase of the Amphicar that appeared in the most recent number in the country was disallowed until the armed forces of the Philippines Medical Center where he was taken on Thursday for tests in connection with a case.

Unlike his trip to the hospital which was made in his own high-end Lotus sport utility vehicle, the ride back to get him to a hospital ambulance.

"We had a new strategy this time. We took a different route from the hospital in (Ramat)," said jail officials who added the media was deliberately not informed about the transfer.

New approach could contain US oil spill soon

DEEP OCEANOGRAPHY efforts to place a new containment cap over the gushing Gulf of Mexico oil well could effectively stop the disastrous spill as early as Monday at 11:30 a.m. local time, says a U.S. official familiar with the plan. The new approach, which would use the government's top engineers, could cut the time to place the cap from 10 days to 10 hours, the official says. The new cap would capture all of the crude oil that is leaking from the well, which is about 10 miles off the coast of Louisiana. The new cap would be placed on the well by a ship that would be towed by a tugboat.

Survey: Veil ban backed in Europe, opposed in US

By Jocelyn Novack and Jim Fitzgerald

PARIS—While most Americans oppose forcing women to wear a headscarf, a new survey shows that a majority of Europeans support the ban. The survey was conducted by a European organization and found that 60% of Europeans support the ban, while 40% oppose it.

US, Russia quickly complete spy swap

VIENNA—In a perfectly choreographed operation, Russia and the United States completed their biggest spy swap since the Cold War on Friday, exchanging 10 agents. Sixteen by the U.S. for four freed by Moscow.

As the clock and dagger move successfully draw the curtain on what could have looked an interesting diplomatic spat between the two nations, more details began to emerge highlighting the high stakes involved.

Special Mission and U.S. flights carried the space to Vietnam early Friday, parked next to each Others have said on Monday that witnesses showed the agents being whisked away from the airport terminal in an unmarked limousine to two destinations.

The American plane, meanwhile, made a final stop at the Peterborough air base in central England, then made a rapid, before taking off again, and landing around 1:30 a.m. (Mashu) at Delhi International airport outside Patna.

It was not immediately clear if all the lost species released by Russia were brought to the United States, as US and British media reported one, and maybe two, of them had escaped laboratories.

The White House reportedly revealed it had been just briefed about the "deep state" Russian spy network as early as February, well before the Russian agents were arrested in an FBI sting on June 27 after a decade-long surveillance.

And it was noted that TSA chief Louis Brande had left regulations with the business not touching the system, which passed into the open just as the former CIA War has an ongoing "Secret" operations.

Verona, the Austrians capital was the old Iron Curtain frontier. But now even such cities since the Cold War, when it was at the heart of the east-west struggle played out between the superpowers.

Rexona Run goes the distance for sports development

What makes a man go the extra mile? Is it the lure of triumphantly crossing the finish line? Or is it the knowledge that each step he takes, each stride he completes may change the landscape of sports development among today's youth?

Rexona later challenges runners to go the distance at the first Rexona Run event on August 1, 2011 at the Shiloh of Bala grounds to help motivate the rise of and excellence of sports among children.

None of the Filipino love affair with sports - whether as a dedicated athlete going for the gold, or as the devoted fan who roots for their sports club - Rexona is committed to advancing sports development among the youth through this run and has pledged to support public school children by providing them with sports equipment and materials.

"Nurturing children who show the interest and passion for a sport also means cultivating in them a discipline that will help them in other aspects of life," says Anna Ramallo, Rexona brand manager. "Our country has produced many world-class athletes through the years. We want to give that passion, burning and make sure the youth are given the guidance and support that they need."

Aside from supporting a worthy cause, runners can expect something new at the Rexona Run. For starters, runners - beginners and enthusiasts alike - will have their route on the 5K, 10K or 15K route. The first time they run, their route will be used as the 5K route.

Another first is the use of the D-Bag, a distinctive timing chip, as used in the much-esteemed "New York City Marathon." The D-Bag is lighter and more accurate than most timing devices and is simply attached to the runner's shoe. Time is recorded via Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) technology each time a runner crosses time checkpoints eliminating long lines and waiting periods. The disposable tag is so accurate causing after the race to return the chips.

Registration begins June 25, 2011 until June 30 at the following three venues: SM Mall of Asia, SM North EDSA, SM Southern Gateway Mall, and at R.O.S. Bonifacio High Street. The data Cloud brings another innovation to the registration process by making use of an iPad at each registration booth to capture the registrants' details and immediately upload it to their database. "Runners are already excited at the idea of experiencing the iPad while signing up for the Rexona Run," says Rio.

Registration is also available online at www.runmo.com. Details of the event will also be posted on Sports Fan Center on Facebook, the fan page of the new Rexona Sport Defense, the brand's latest apparel designed for the sports fan.

Fees are at P400 (5K), P600 (10K) and P750 (15K). Race kits will be given to participants upon registration and include a singlet, bib, D-Bag and a 1-liter Rexona Sport Defense tumbler.

For more information, please call the event hotline at (02) 793 1738.

Just call me Rene

By Amy B. Rios

HE WANTED to be simply called "Rene."

Shyly-apologetic Energy Secretary Juan Rene D. Almonte, who typically stood away from the spotlight during his stint with the private sector, tells the Inquirer that the "biggest problem of people is they can't refer to me by my first name."

During my first day here, one of the secretaries noted his confusion by "Monsieur Almonte Secretary..." and I didn't realize he was talking to me because I was looking the other way. Then I realized that he was looking at me, and he started off very again with "Monsieur Almonte Secretary," Almonte more off with a smile.

But more than just the Babay effect and inevitable awkward to him, Almonte admits that a number of things in his life have more than changed—they have completely turned around, after he accepted the post.

Almonte relates that it was very difficult for the family to make the decision and to accept the role that he was about to leave his life as a complete change in lifestyle.

"We always expected the privacy of living a very quiet life even when I was a CEO of the Ayala companies. I don't even think you even know it of me. I was one of the quietest men here. CEOs and senior executives know about me to when there's a matter but on something like this," he says.

"I lived away from a lot of exposure and everything else—my family and I were all very private people and that was the biggest, most difficult part and a twist in a quiet life was a twist in a quiet life," he adds.

Eventually, it was the call to serve the country that put a finality to his decision.

"I guess it's shared across, shared experiences. Maybe it's partly about growing old. President Joseph Estrada (E) and I both lost second filials and at the end of the day, as the president himself would say, it would be all about 'what is yours.' Almonte says.

Preparing for the job

When he took on the post last July 2, Almonte has done his share of homework as he had already completed his research among the standard agencies and had met with the heads of key agencies. Within the first three days, Almonte had great through over 10 meetings with different energy officials.

"The very happy with what I see, there's a lot of progress, progress here," he adds.

Almonte, however, has not so much with the private sector. In the interest of keeping it private, he keeps it hush-hush.

'If you believe in your idea, the money will come'

HUBERT Young

By Chapiro Medina
 Contributor

HUBERT YOUNG HAS VERY few ideas about how he wants to run his restaurant. Take the case of Sake Sushi, Or Cakes & Creams, Or even UCC. All are brands that originated outside the Philippines—the first two being popular and trendy restaurants in Singapore and the last in Japan—but, thanks to his strong vision, are now taking firm root in the Filipino's gourmet landscape.

UCC is Hubert's first restaurant. Actually, back then, it was a small cafe rising on its weekend appreciation by customers of brewed brewed coffee and loaves, thriving in early days at Tomas Moron in Quezon City (UCC offered a decidedly Japanese twist of coffee brewed in a direct immersion way).

But Hubert was not satisfied with just serving coffee. "Why are other businesses?" he asks himself at one point, seeing the natural opportunity to make a bigger name in developing an organized menu, it was never doubt that there was to be a touch of Japanese in the offerings, but how to drive this in the Filipino palate was the challenge.

To develop a unique menu that his customers would appreciate, Hubert copied, and on his basis made of observation particularly of what restaurant habitats liked the clientele, he noted a growing market for pure dishes. Taking his best experience from food experts in Japan, he boldly tried unique Japanese style during ingredients with the local cooking. The result, surprisingly pleasant taste.

There are no chefs at UCC. "I simply ask the cooking staff to prepare a new dish that I think would make a good addition to the menu. They'll say, 'add more eggs please, or put more of this on top,'" says Hubert. Looking outward and inward with himself, he adds that he'd take out his camera and take a photo of the final dish. At the moment opportunity, it would be on the menu.

That is how the menu system for employees at Cakes & Creams, a franchise together with Sake Sushi that Hubert signed up for at the opening of Singaporean businessman Douglas Kim, in Singapore, Cakes & Creams is now a decent station, here in the Philippines, it has evolved into a fast food style, just as Hubert intended it.

The local Cakes & Creams founder will big names added to the menu that would "savoury" taste to the Philippine. Cakes & Creams is the Japanese-inspired here and unique, as—Hubert says—baked in the oven.

Once again, like UCC, Cakes & Creams has evolved into something as subtle as Singaporean, considering, an innovation that Hubert is quick to point out has never been heard here.

While Cakes & Creams was discontinued in Singapore, its name brand Sake Sushi continues to do well. But still, Hubert says he had to introduce major changes in the local market to make it viable, that of the Clear waters = Fresh, clean taste

How can you tell if bangus tastes fresh and clean? Find out where it was raised.

It's natural that bangus raised in the open seas is clean tasting and waiting being gills a profit.

Century Bangus is raised in Century farms in the open seas of GenSan. Out in the sea, dissolved oxygen is abundant for growth and survival. Waves wash away wastes so as not to pollute the environment. Bigger and deeper waters provide space for growth and meat development.

Blue seas have clean waters that provide a natural growing environment. Here, bangus feeds on nutritionally-balanced fish feeds to attain the desired quality.

The Century Way

Century Bangus is bred and grown in Century farms that operate under the strictest measures using sustainable and environment-friendly methods. The farms are registered with the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources, while the processing plants are Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points (HACCP) - certified.

Farm-fresh World-class!

Century Bangus comes straight from the Century farms to your favorite supermarkets and groceries to your table and to the world - so you, your family and friends can enjoy its blue sea-freshness.

Piolo's Healthy Choice

Piolo's healthy lifestyle demands healthy eating. His work-hard, play-hard routine calls for convenient yet healthy and delicious meal options. This is why Century Bangus is Piolo's healthy choice. He delights in the fact that Century Bangus has Omega 3 DHA and he gets to enjoy it in a variety of ways and flavors - straight from the can or hot from the pan.

For Piolo, bangus, like Century, is always bangin' and sarap! Sarap na farm-fresh, world-class!

Green Initiatives From the SM Supermalls

SAVING THE WORLD ONE GREEN ACT AT A TIME

Students and teachers from public schools from all over the Philippines were among those privileged to listen to former US Vice President and Nobel Laureate Al Gore during the second forum about climate change at the SM Convention Center.

SM Prime Holdings sponsored the event as part of its environmental advocacy and the students and their mentors were able to part of it through the generous kind efforts of the SMs.

After all, there is nothing like embracing a green lifestyle when one is young.

And while climate change is a reality, the much of discreditable knowledge on how to act on it is either institutionalized by law or simply indifferent.

This teacher and student, however, came home changed, promising to do their share for the environment one green act at a time. We recently visited the Pinaglabanan Elementary School, the Bacoor National High School, the Pasig National High School, the Pasig National High School, and the Pasig National High School, and they shared with us their own green initiatives.

Pamantasan ng Lungsod ng Pasig: Nurturing Esteros

With Pasig taking pride in its efforts to become a Green City, it is not surprising that schools within the area should be leaders in environmental programs. The Pamantasan ng Lungsod ng Pasig, for example, is leading its Nurturing Esteros movement this July.

Through the movement initiated by the NHTF Department headed by Ms. Patricia Alarcon, students help keep esteros free from trash around it, and by teaching children living around the area how to take care of the estero and how to keep them clean.

This school also takes small steps in encouraging the students to embrace the green lifestyle. Through regular forums, students learn the basis on solid waste management, as well as water, air, and land pollution. Several years ago, students planted trees in front of the campus to make the place more enjoyable and less hot.

Pinaglabanan Elementary School: A Wake-up Call

Students and teachers from the Pinaglabanan Elementary School are aware that Al Gore's lecture on climate change is a wake-up call for everyone. Since the awareness, the school has been transformed into an eco-friendly place with a vegetable garden where students plant cabbages, eggplants, and various types of leafy greens. They also have a small pond where they raise tilapia and a space for poultry livestock.

The Pinaglabanan Elementary School was a 2009 National Science Fair, where it was awarded a 2nd place. It was also awarded a 2nd place in the 2009 National Science Fair, where it was awarded a 2nd place.

Gawaran National High School: A Green Curriculum

As a responsible member of the community, SM Supermalls has collaborated with schools in the area where the mall is located to provide environmental awareness. By inviting the students and teachers to the SM Supermalls, it reinforced the awareness, resulting small but significant steps to help save the environment.

How They Are Making the Change

Nelson Malinao, Social Studies Teacher
"I feel blessed to be part of the Al Gore conference. This awareness has inspired me to include ecological initiatives in my social studies classes."

I am also thankful to SM for inviting our students to the Green Film Festival. It is one way of informing our students on how they can improve their lifestyle and their environment."

Al Gore has said that politics is terrible compared to the environment, and every child should know that climate change is a very important global concern. I teach physics and consider the subject very much related to climate change because everything we do involves energy and physics is about energy. In my own life, I am teaching my students to conserve energy and how they can help save the environment.

I hope that SM will continue to spearhead environmentally friendly projects such as this."

Bacoor National High School: Green Mentoring

Teachers at the Bacoor National High School are aware that Al Gore's lecture on climate change is a wake-up call for everyone. They also have a small pond where they raise tilapia and a space for poultry livestock.

How They Are Making the Change

Librada Mervela, World History Teacher
"I was moved when Al Gore said, 'economic stability is good, but think about the effect of climate change and the people that will be affected. Save the earth.'"

"SM is a nice place to start saving the earth. Because they have already started using green bags, and showing their love to help save the earth. I hope to be a good mentor to my students, who I will continuously teach the values about clean and green recycling."

Maria Chaves, Science and Technology Teacher

ROUND doorway of a pharmacy, for good luck.

There was much more to discover in these ancient hamlets than just this body of water—a place with the perfect feng shui

By Ina Manalo
 Contributor

WATCHING THE MOVIE "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon," I was entranced by a scene where a number of combatants leap across a pond, their feet barely grating the surface.

I vividly recall that the pond was surrounded by ancient houses whose dignified façades were reflected in the water. Later, when I saw an exhibition about the domestic architecture of Fujian and learned that the village's name's sequence was first in a small community in this province, my motive to visit the place grew.

The opportunity finally came in a crisp Hangzhou, with Linziway/Globe City. Our hosts very graciously agreed to arrange a side expedition to the ancient hamlets of nearby Fujian.

Finally I was going to see my pond. As a second son, there was much more to discover than just this body of water.

Two of the oldest villages, Bai and Hongqian, have preserved their traditional architecture so beautifully that they were placed on the Chinese World Heritage List in 2003.

Here, being on the list actually has its pluses and negatives. On one hand, it brings glamour and recognition. On the other hand, the many visitors that show up may tax the carrying capacity of a site. Sometimes, there are even rumors that tourists are disrupting local residents.

Virtual guides

Walking around the time-pulsed lanes in Bai and Hongqian, I couldn't help thinking: What was it like to live here in the 10th and early 20th centuries when these two villages were among the most prosperous in the land? What was it like to go in and out of these houses, that were magnificent, but a burden to an average villager?

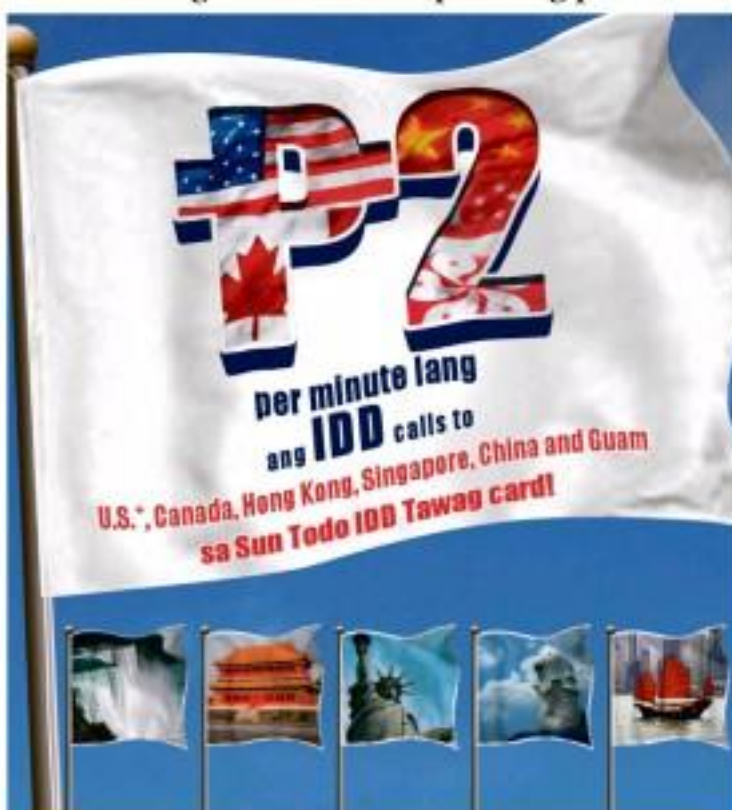

I began to understand that the very traditional dwellings were designed and even the manner they were distributed on the terrain could be read as virtual guides or maps. These helped instruct residents on the grade and use of living.

As one writer has pointed out: "The Chinese house 'is structured to shape family organization and to structure the web of social and ethical norms that linked the household to the world beyond.'"

Moreover, these dwellings of alleys and courtyards were representing different patterns that were formed and repeated all across the region. Hongqian and Bai were built along on that they were influenced by water and followed by intelligent design.

That is a long and sophisticated that one will see even at the Forbidden City in Beijing, overlooking Beijing to the north.

Making most of the spa experience

Doing these little things may go a long way

By Kenneth M. de Rosea

A TIP-TO-A-KID, I BELIEVE TO BE A relaxing experience. But like in other things, coming without preparation or the wrong attitude can make your spa experience less than ideal.

Beforehand, it is important that you feel at your most comfortable with the place/ambience, the staff, the spa/parlour, the services and prices, and the location. Otherwise, you're in for a bad time.

For that first spa visit, consider doing these spa experiences. They're mostly common sense, but a lot of them aren't just one more experience.

1. Take a shower

A visit to the spa should be a relaxing experience of being and feeling clean, eliminating any feeling of stress that may come from a busy day. So, it's a good idea to shower before you go. It's a simple step that avoids washing your face.

2. Drink tea later

Many spas offer complimentary tea when you visit their spa. But if you're the person who usually takes a bath or is taking a shower, you might want to skip the tea. It's a good idea to drink tea later in the day.

3. Get the right service

Do not be afraid or intimidated in asking the receptionist about the different services or body treatments. Ask them what you would like to do. They'll be happy to assist you.

4. Ask for promotions

Spas have their own promotions. Usually if you choose more than one service, you'll get a discount. Ask them what you would like to do. They'll be happy to assist you.

5. Get the right pressure

Speak up if the pressure is too high or

Abstract: This study sought to determine whether the use of a computer-based decision support system (DSS) would improve the performance of a group of novice users in a complex, multi-step task. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The participants were 10 novice users who were assigned to two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group used a standard decision-making process, while the experimental group used a DSS. The results showed that the experimental group performed significantly better than the control group in terms of task completion time and accuracy. The DSS provided the experimental group with a structured framework for decision-making, which helped them to identify and solve problems more effectively. The study also found that the DSS reduced the cognitive load on the users, which allowed them to focus more on the task at hand. Overall, the study suggests that a DSS can be a valuable tool for improving the performance of novice users in complex tasks.

CAMPBELL'S CARPENTRY, REAL.—INSTEAD of using firearms, members of the Philippine Army "shot it out" with a hand-held camera to produce a 17-minute short film. It was the first time the soldiers joined a filmmaking workshop.

Upgrading skills

"The Philippine Army wanted to upgrade our skills by also giving us cinematic and visual production," explained Lt. Colonel Frank Reyes, chief of the Public Affairs Office of the 2nd Infantry Division based here.

Sergeant and Private First Class Norberto Jose Jr., John R. Boudin, Norberto Saldaña, Wilfredo Boudin and Raul Rafael graduated last week as members of the 10th batch of the basic filmmaking workshop facilitated by Filipino Pictures Inc.

It was division commander Maj. Gen. Jorge Sison who thought of sending his men to the filmmaking workshop, after appearing last episode of ANC's "Storyline."

"He talked to the show's director (Mark Villanueva) and producer (Mark Faustino) about it," Sison said.

Like working students

The two-month workshop started with an 11-day lecture on script writing, film making techniques.

"We were like real film students. We had to work in discipline and then enjoy for two hours from 7pm to 9pm (in Olongapo City) to shoot the workshop night," Sison recalled.

DIRECTOR (L.) Colonel Frank Reyes gives instructions to actors Gary Reyes.

The film they worked on, "Basta ng Diyos," which is also the title of a popular country love song, was shot for 20 hours straight inside the military camp.

Sison said the film was selected from the 100 story of interest from Pts. Lema, Bulabula, who is now with the army's 202nd Infantry Brigade.

In the film, Bulabula played by Gary Reyes, a youth volunteer of the Philippine Army to Germany, Quinson is a former rebel who was recruited by the government after he was captured and ended up as a victim of the violence of the communist in the 1960s.

Sison believes filmmaking can be an effective communication tool for the army. "Basta ng Diyos" was shown at the Army camp here and has also been invited for a screening at the Philippine National Police headquarters.
